Sir Robert Chiltern. At the start of the play Sir Robert Chiltern is the "ideal husband" who gives the play its title. He is 40 years old, clean cut, and good-looking. In Act 1 he is proud of himself and all he has done in his career and for his country. He is also content with and proud of his marriage. However, his career rests upon a secret: when he was just starting out he sold a government secret illegally to a speculator, who used it to make himself and Sir Robert a lot of money.
