IB SL Maths includes sections on basic algebra, probability, statistics, and trigonometry, as well as actual calculus, and the calculus in the IB exam is a lot easier than in AP Calculus, which delves deeper into calculus as a whole and leaves behind basic algebra and pre-calculus. On the other hand, AP Calculus is just pure applied calculus, so unless you know your calculus really well there are no "easy" points where they ask you simple questions about linear or quadratic equations.
