Womens Poetry Of Late Imperial China Transforming The ...

Introduction. There is a strong but neglected tradition of women's poetry written in response to the events of the First World War. Many of these poems are the products of direct experience of the processes of war — making weapons, nursing the wounded, the loss of brothers, sons, or lovers in the trenches — by women on active service in the battle areas as well as by women involved in

Women in ancient and imperial China - Wikipedia

The third section takes up the issue of contextualization: how male writers situated women's poetry in their essays, stories, and travelogues. The fourth section pursues the same issue, but with reference to China's greatest work of fiction, Dream of the Red Chamber, first published in 1792, most of whose leading characters are talented gentrywomen.

Writing Women in Late Imperial China

The exact role and status of women in the Roman world, and indeed in most ancient societies, has often been obscured by the biases of both ancient male writers and 19-20th century CE male scholars, a situation only relatively recently redressed by modern scholarship which has sought to more objectively assess women's status, rights, duties, representation in the arts, and daily lives; and all ...
