The development of thinking skills using complex questions has to be an application for such past paper questions, where students may be scaffolded in their completion of an answer. In class we found a number of ways to do this by working in groups or as a whole class, selecting individuals to add a sentence to the answer and collaboratively refining the answer.

Brightside Mentoring

I know conversations in staff rooms across the country are bemoaning the lack of past papers for the new GCSEs.

Rather paradoxically, we should seize this as an opportunity to shift our assessment practice and to work upon developing precise diagnostic tools that are more likely to generate learning and consolidate knowledge and understanding.

The Problem with Past Papers

A single piece of plain white paper laminated on both sides is also acceptable. It must be no larger than 30x50cm (12x20 inches). The following items are NOT allowed*: Whiteboards with grids, other markings or background colours; Paper; Pen / Pencil; Permanent Marker; Tissues, Paper Towels, Napkins; Whiteboard Spray; Paper in a clear slide
