The Law That Changed The

The Factory Act of 1833, among a host of changes, banned children under 9 from working in textile mills, banned children under 18 from working at night, and children between 9 and 13 were not permitted to work unless they had a schoolmaster's certificate showing they had received two hours' education per day - so the Factory Act not only improved factory conditions, but also began to pave the way towards education for all.
