In mathematics, model theory is the study of classes of mathematical structures (e.g. groups, fields, graphs, universes of set theory) from the perspective of mathematical logic. The objects of study are models of theories in a formal language. A set of sentences in a formal language is one of the components that form a theory. A model of a theory is a structure (e.g. an interpretation) that ...

model theory for languages extending the first-order ones, abstract model theory, applied model theory: non-standard analysis, algebraic model theory, model theory of other special theories, recursive model theory, finite-model theory, classification theory. There are occasional hints at the first and the fourth, leaving the others largely untouched.

Basic Model Theory - Stanford University

In mathematical logic, true arithmetic is the set of all true statements about the arithmetic of natural numbers. This is the theory associated with the standard model of the Peano axioms in the language of the first-order Peano axioms. True arithmetic is occasionally called Skolem arithmetic, though this term usually refers to the different theory of natural numbers with multiplication.

True arithmetic - Wikipedia

In mathematics, model theory is the study of the relationship between formal theories (a collection of sentences in a formal language expressing statements about a mathematical structure), and their models, taken as interpretations that satisfy the sentences of that theory.
