Fuel injection is the introduction of fuel in an internal combustion engine, most commonly automotive engines, by the means of an injector . All compression-ignition (diesel) engines use fuel injection, and many Spark-ignition engines use fuel injection of one kind or another. In automobile engines, fuel injection was first volume-produced in the late 1960s, and gradually gained prevalence until it had largely replaced carburetors by the early 1990s.

An aircraft fuel system allows the crew to pump, manage, and deliver aviation fuel to the propulsion system and auxiliary power unit of an aircraft. Fuel systems differ greatly due to different performance of the aircraft in which they are installed. A single-engine piston aircraft has a simple fuel system; a tanker, in addition to managing its own fuel, can also provide fuel to other aircraft. Fuel is piped through fuel lines to a fuel control valve. This valve serves several functions. The fir

Aircraft fuel system - Wikipedia

A fuel-injection system uses an engine-driven pump to push fuel through a metering system, which then flows through an injector line to each cylinder. A backup electrical pump often is required, which means additional weight, current draw and associated wiring.
