Civil Jury Trials

Jury trials amount for less than 1% of all criminal trials due to most cases being dealt with in magistrates' court; of those cases that do proceed to Crown Court, approximately two-thirds will plead guilty. Other cases that find their way to Crown Court may be discharged by the judge and therefore leave no need for a jury. Juries in civil cases

When are juries used in criminal and civil cases ...

A civil jury is a group of citizens who, along with a judge, hear a matter of civil law. At the conclusion of the trial, the jurors decide whether or not the case has merit, and if they believe that the person who brought suit is in the right, they can award damages. Civil juries can contain between six and 12 people, depending on the case and the jurisdiction. A civil jury is a group of peers that helps settle legal disputes.

Updated January 27, 2020. The Seventh Amendment to the United States Constitution ensures the right to a trial by jury in any civil lawsuit involving claims valued at more than $20. In addition, the amendment prohibits the courts from overturning a jury's findings of fact in civil suits. The amendment does not, however, guarantee a trial by jury in civil cases brought against the federal government.

Seventh Amendment: Jury Trials in Civil Cases

A jury trial, or trial by jury, is a lawful proceeding in which a jury makes a decision or findings of fact. It is distinguished from a bench trial in which a judge or panel of judges makes all decisions. Jury trials are used in a significant share of serious criminal cases in many but not all common law judicial systems.
