Language Ideology and Point of View | Request PDF

Language ideology is used within anthropology, sociolinguistics, and cross-cultural studies, to characterize any set of beliefs about languages as they are used in their social worlds. When recognized and explored, language ideologies expose how the speakers' linguistic beliefs are linked to the broader social and cultural systems to which they belong, illustrating how the systems beget such beliefs. By doing so, language ideologies link implicit and explicit assumptions about a language or lang

Language ideology - Wikipedia

A number of researchers nowadays are fond of talking about 'linguistic ideology' and many students want to write about it, for example for course papers etc. Students in my classes will have noticed that I have not discussed language 'ideology' per se at any point in the class, and will not find it in anything that I have written, except perhaps to critique it.

Language and Ideology

Language ideology is a theory whereby people are defined or judged by the language they speak. This involves different aspects of language including intonation, dialect, accent, grammar and vocabulary. The interaction of people from different backgrounds in a social setting invariably leads to the assignment of people to different categories.

What Is Language Ideology? (with pictures)

From Lippi-Green's point of view, standard language ideology is a 'bias toward an abstracted, idealized, non-varying spoken language that is imposed and maintained by dominant institutions'. The author points out that such thing as a homogenous language or national standard is impossible since everyone speaks one dialect or the other.

Standard Language Ideology

Language ideologies are conceptualizations about languages, speakers, and discursive practices. Like other kinds of ideologies, language ideologies are pervaded with political and moral interests and are shaped in a cultural setting. To study language ideologies, then, is to explore the nexus of language, culture, and politics.
