USA NOIR is a "Best Of" selection from the volumes set in USA cities and locales; the separate volumes have pretty good reputations for quality on their own, so USA NOIR is damn good. There were a few stories included that left me cold, but almost all were enjoyable If you're at all a fan of noir fiction, you've probably seen at least one or two volumes of the City Noir anthologies published by Akashic Press.

Pinot noir is best served slightly chilled, usually around 55°F, which is below room temperature. There is a tendency for most people to serve red wine at room temperature, which is permissible but doesn't necessarily allow you to gain the most out of the bottle — especially if it’s an expensive and quality selection.
