The Truth About Invisalign. May 27, 2020. Traditional braces have come a long way in recent years, undergoing changes to their design, shape, and size. Today's braces are smaller, more aesthetically pleasing, and more efficient at correcting a wide range of orthodontic issues than they've ever been. As innovative as these new designs are, however, some patients are still hesitant about using them to achieve a straighter, healthier smile.

While any type of orthodontic treatment requires a certain level of commitment from patients in order to be successful, compliance is especially important for Invisalign patients. Braces are a fixed appliance—meaning they are affixed to the surface of the teeth—so most of the hard work is done without too much effort on the part of the patient. Aligners are a removable appliance, however.
