The semiotic square, derived from Aristotle's logical square of opposition, was developed by Algirdas J. Greimas, a French - Lithuanian linguist and semiotician, who considered the semiotic square to be the elementary structure of meaning.

Semiotic square - Wikipedia

Greimas emphasizes the idea that language is an “assemblage of structures of signification” which implies that the language system cannot be “given” in advance but must be articulated as discourse (discourse, for Greimas, is “language as taken on by the person who is speaking”).
