Lip and Palate)

Children with a cleft lip or palate will be monitored closely as they grow and develop. This will include their hearing, jaw and teeth development and speech. Most children are able to develop good speech and language skills following surgery. But sometimes a repaired cleft palate can make it difficult for a child to pronounce some sounds clearly.

Cleft lip and cleft palate occur when tissues in the baby's face and mouth don't fuse properly.

Normally, the tissues that make up the lip and palate fuse together in the second and third months of pregnancy. But in babies with cleft lip and cleft palate, the fusion never takes place or occurs only part way, leaving an opening (cleft).

Some children with a cleft lip can also have a cleft defect in the alveolus – the bone that holds our teeth in place. If there is an alveolar cleft, the teeth near it may erupt in the wrong place or may not erupt at all. Sometimes, the teeth near a cleft may be absent, have an unusual shape or there can be extra teeth.
