Posted on May 22, 2009 by Todd Shaffer. As Wayne wraps up his 5 year long series of lectures going through his excellent Systematic Theology, he looks at the varying views of the millennium, final judgment, hell, and the new heavens and new earth. Wayne spends little time on the Post-millennial view because it's based on very few and very weak proof-texts.

Systematic theology is a science where theologians study the Bible on a particular subject to see what does the Bible say about this topic. There are many books on systematic theology, with many different theological views, positions, and traditions. Many of these books hold the same name, but few are as popular today as Grudem's . The book that I've been using as a guide in my posts on systematic theology, Wayne Grudem's Systematic Theology (Grand Rapids, Michigan: Zondervan, 1994), takes the position that all final judgment will take place there. He presents evidence that both unbelievers and believers will be judged in it, unbelievers to receive punishment and believers to receive rewards; that angels will be judged in it; and that we will help in the work of judgment.

Doctrine of Justification: Wayne Grudem Systematic Theology. Justification is an instantaneous legal act of God in which he (1) thinks of our sins as forgiven and Christ's righteousness as belonging to us, and (2) declares us to be righteous in his sight. Wayne Grudem covers the doctrine of Justification, showing how it is a very practical doctrine, and also tackles some common misunderstandings.

Systematic Theology is remarkable for its extraordinary juxtapositions. It is penetrating but not confusing; forthright and unequivocal but not reckless or overstated; readable and clear but not superficial; biblically grounded, even biblically saturated, but not textually careless or glib; devout and reverent but not uncritical or naïve; practical but not trendy or sentimental; comprehensive but not majoring on minors; a book for the church but not parochial or sectarian.
