So I think it's great that Alan focuses on what appears to be the most common language used for creating Selenium scripts -Java. If you have little or no Java programming experience, the good news is that you need not be a master developer. Alan takes you step-by- step through the fundamentals of Java that pertain specifically to testers. Everything you'll learn is geared toward testing, so you won't be wasting your time on concepts you'll never use.
