Lighting Guide Animal Cages

The Arcadia Reptile Light Guide is a tool to enable keepers to make an informed choice of lighting for their reptile, amphibian or invertebrate. Historically, advice for reptiles was simply to buy a 5% UVB lamp for forest animals and a 10% lamp for desert animals. No real thought was given to the unique adaptations of the species and their basking behaviours or the distance between the lamp and the animal in the living area.

Lighting Guide - Arcadia Reptile:

Effective Animal Welfare

The daylight bulb is there to provide the overall lighting of the cage while the basking light is used to warm a specific portion of the cage such as a rock or a piece of wood. Basking lights are also commonly controlled with a rheostat since the intention of a basking bulb is to focus a large portion of heat onto a small surface, thus recreating an area that the animal would use to bask in nature.

Heating & Lighting For Your PVC Enclosure — Apex Cages

Adequate lighting is necessary for cleaning of the kennel as well as handling and observation of the animal, but is also very important to promote the correct animal behaviour. Lighting should be left on all day (not just when workers are present), but with darker areas in the kennel to allow the animal to sleep during the day.

General Principles of Small Animal Housing

Cages for small animals come in all shapes and sizes, and each cage is best suited to a different type of pet. Whether you are looking for a cage for hamsters, gerbils, guinea pigs, degus, rats, mice or chinchillas – you can find the perfect habitat at The Pet Express.

Cages For All Small Animals - Hamsters, Guinea Pigs, Mice ...

Young albino and pigmented mice prefer much-lower illumination than adults (Wax 1977), although potential retinal damage associated with housing these rodents at higher light levels is mostly reversible. Thus, for animals that have been shown to be susceptible to phototoxic retinopathy, light at the cage level should be between 130 and 325 lux.
