TikZ/PGF is a flexible and powerful package for creating graphics in LaTeX. It's syntax can be somewhat overwhelming at the beginning. In this post I show the basics of tree drawing using TikZ and LuaLaTeX. The following code only works with LuaLaTeX. Make sure you use the lualatex engine rather than standard tex/latex for typesetting.

The lines used to draw trees look better if this package is used with the styles `epic.sty` and `eepic.sty`. which provide enhancements to the LaTeX picture environment. This version of `qtree` will automatically include `eepic.sty` if it can find it, so if `eepic.sty` is in the style files directory, it should not be necessary to give " `eepic` " as a style argument.

`tikz-qtree` - Use existing `qtree` syntax for trees in TikZ. The package provides a macro for drawing trees with TikZ using the easy syntax of Alexis Dimitriadis' `Qtree`. It improves on TikZ's standard tree-drawing facility by laying out tree nodes without collisions; it improves on Qtree by adding lots of features from TikZ (for example, edge labels, arrows between nodes); and it improves on pst-qtree in being usable with pdf T.
