Most people look at the extension of a file and then guess the type of file from that extension. For example, when you see a file with an extension of gif, jpg, bmp, or png you think of an image file, and when you see a file with an extension of zip, you assume the file has been compressed using a zip compression utility.

True file type scanning works in conjunction with IntelliScan to scan only those file types known to be potentially dangerous. These technologies can reduce, by as much as two-thirds, the number of files the scan engine examines; this file-scanning reduction also creates some risk that a harmful file might be allowed onto the network.
