The Enlightened Economy: Britain and the Industrial ...

By 1850, Britain had a GDP almost 65% higher than Germany and 30% higher than the United States. This is amazing to me in that both had populations at least 50% greater, with land areas far, far larger. Economic statistics display the enormous gap that opened up between Britain and its European competitors.

The enlightened economy: Britain and the industrial revolution, 1700-1850. Mokyr, Joel. Mokyr argues that the early shape & pace of modern economic development in Britain depended as much on what key players knew & believed as any other factors. He contends that this explains why Britain took the lead in the Industrial Revolution.
