About Brain Diseases

Mental illnesses and substance use disorders are biologically based brain disorders. One out of five people in America has a mental illness (more than two million Ohioans), yet less than one-third of affected adults and one-half of children receive treatment. Mental illnesses are biologically based brain disorders.

About Brain Diseases

For example, conditions such as Parkinson's disease and stroke cause changes in the brain. In some cases, these changes may have a direct role in depression. Illness-related anxiety and stress can also trigger symptoms of depression. Depression is common among people who have chronic illnesses such as the following:
