Here are 7 important considerations when mentoring new teachers. 1. Your educational philosophy isn't the only one. Take time to talk with your colleague about their views on education, in particular, their philosophy. Get a big picture view of how they expect to impact student learning in their classroom. 2. Be careful to suggest, not demand.

7 Important Considerations When Mentoring New Teachers ...

The mentor teacher and the student teacher will plan and co-teach lessons on a cooperative basis. This kind of team teaching experience provides opportunities for the student teacher to both observe and experience the teaching process, as well as ask questions along the way. 3. Independent Teaching Plus Observation.

Strategies for Mentoring Student Teachers | Resilient Educator

Part-time mentors are typically veteran special education teachers located at the new teacher's school. They are assigned the responsibility of mentoring in addition to their regular teaching duties. Compensation usually is provided through a stipend. One advantage to this structure is proximity.
