Constructivism And Education

Constructivism's central idea is that human learning is constructed, that learners build new knowledge upon the foundation of previous learning. This prior knowledge influences what new or modified knowledge an individual will construct from new learning experiences (Phillips, 1995). Learning is an active process

Constructivism as a Theory for Teaching and Learning ...

A constructivist approach to education sees students as active, powerful, capable and competent. It tends to encourage students to learn through 'doing', which helps with engagement, critical thinking, and memory retention.

What is Constructivism in Education? Piaget's Pros & Cons

Constructivism is a theory in education that recognizes the learners' understanding and knowledge based on their own experiences prior to entering school. It is associated with various philosophical positions, particularly in epistemology as well as ontology, politics, and ethics.

Constructivism (philosophy of education) - Wikipedia

Constructivism in education has roots in Epistemology. The learner has prior knowledge and experiences, which is often determined by their social and cultural environment. Learning is therefore done by students' "constructing" knowledge out of their experiences. While the Behaviorist school of learning may help understand what students are doing, educators also need to know what students are thinking, and how to enrich what students are thinking.
