John Dryden (1631–1700), the great representative figure in the literature of the latter part of the seventeenth century, exemplifies in his work most of the main tendencies of the time. He came into notice with a poem on the death of Cromwell in 1658, and two years later was composing couplets expressing his loyalty to the returned king.

All For Love

John Dryden dedicates All for Love to an aristocratic patron: Thomas Osborne, Earl of Danby. Dryden claims that poets are less noble than politicians and public figures, since they can only write about “worthy actions,” whereas others can actually do them. But he also argues that poets are important to a commonwealth because they chronicle the great deeds and history of their country.
