Most of the work involves the denominator. If the denominators of the two fractions are already the same, much of the work is done. Simply subtract the two numerators to get the answer fraction using the same denominator, and then reduce and make a proper fraction. If the two values being subtracted are mixed fractions, it is often easier to turn them into improper fractions to perform the subtraction.

The first time kids discover that there's more to math than whole numbers, they are likely to be a tad confused. And sometimes that confusion extends throughout the entirety of elementary school, where an initial introduction to concepts like numerators and denominators is followed by comparing fractions, adding and subtracting fractions, multiplying fractions, simplifying fractions and so on.
