Gender inequalities, including gender-based and intimate partner violence, exacerbate women and girls' physiological vulnerability to HIV and block their access to HIV services.³ HIV is not only driven by gender inequality, but it also entrenches gender inequality, leaving women more vulnerable to its impact.⁴

Gender inequality and HIV | Avert

The main drivers of the HIV epidemic are influenced by a wide range of gender inequalities. Early and forced marriage, gender-based violence, unequal access to information, including sexual health knowledge, and a lack of negotiating power and economic autonomy are among the factors that place women and adolescent girls at increased risk of HIV infection as well as circumscribe their responses to being infected.
