Section 9.1: Momentum and Impulse. of an object is calculated as its velocity times its mass, and given the symbol p . As mass is a scalar and velocity is a vector, momentum is also a vector quantity. The concept of momentum comes from the force from Newton's Second Law. Momentum has units of kg m/s .

Chapter 9: Linear Momentum - Introductory Physics Resources

In this chapter, we develop and define another conserved quantity, called linear momentum, and another relationship (the impulse-momentum theorem), which will put an additional constraint on how a system evolves in time. Conservation of momentum is useful for understanding collisions, such as that shown in the above image.
