How to use a gray card for custom White Balance in camera. Another part of that question is why to use a gray card for white balancing in camera. My answer is two fold. First I almost never do custom white balance in camera. It's a pain to do, slows the photo session down, and if the light changes you have to do it over again anyway.

How to Use a Gray Card for Custom White Balance and Metering

White balance ensures that colors are unaffected by the color of the light source. Auto white balance is recommended with most light sources. If the desired results cannot be achieved with auto white balance, choose an option from the list below or use preset white balance. All values are approximate and do not reflect fine-tuning (if applicable).

White Balance Options

Usually, you will put your camera in manual white balance mode, and press a button. Then, the camera will wait until you point at a white, gray, or neutrally colored object. Press the shutter, and the camera will record the white balance at this depth. Redo this process every 5-10ft for best results.
