All the Days and Nights is the story of an art hunt during a twilight period of painting. It lays bare two relationships that are ever changing and incomparable: of the artist and the muse, and of lovers. It is an exploration of what it means to create, what it means to inspire, what it means to live....more

All the Days and Nights by Niven Govinden

Many were bedtime stories told to his wife of 55 years, such as the title story, "All the Days and Nights" about a man who wonders "Where have all the days and nights of my life gone" and he sets off to find them. The stories come from Maxwell's middle (1954) and older years (1992); his first novel, "Bright Center of

He is that skilled a writer and the stories in "All Our Days and Nights" are that good. Maxwell offers 23 stories, some as short as six pages ("Haller's Second Home") and some as long as 39 pages, almost a novella ("Over by the River"). These are followed by 21 short stories he calls "Improvisations" and we might call magical realism.

The exhibition's title All the Days and Nights nods to a note written by Frida Kahlo accompanying a portrait that she gifted to her friends on the occasion of their marriage in which she references the power of a portrait to not only transcend time, but to also offer a kind of double, a 'stand-in' presence. Hailing from different backgrounds and artistic practices, the show's participating artists explore contemporary forms of portraiture through representations of the self, the ...
