The House of Birds is no such book though - both Oliver and Sophia are fascinating, intricate characters who go through moving character arcs that sweep the reader along in their path - you're never eager to leave one time period and go into another, but you're never disappointed to find yourself in the company of either group of characters. It's also important to note that fascinating social issues are touched upon too, with Sophia a woman trapped in a loveless marriage, desperate to ...

Abby Field loves every inch of Meadowsweet Nature Reserve on the idyllic Suffolk coast where she lives and works. Especially Swallowtail House, the rambling but empty country house that seems to look out at her each time she passes it's shut-up windows. When a TV wildlife programme choses a rival location for their new series, Meadowsweet is under threat - unless Abby can whip up a plan to keep the visitors flocking.

The House of Birds and Butterflies - Cressida McLaughlin

The Birds is a 1963 American natural horror - thriller film produced and directed by Alfred Hitchcock. Loosely based on the 1952 story of the same title by Daphne du Maurier, it focuses on a series of sudden and unexplained violent bird attacks on the people of Bodega Bay, California, over the course of a few days.
