Event Tree Analysis

Event tree analysis (ETA) is a forward, top-down, logical modeling technique for both success and failure that explores responses through a single initiating event and lays a path for assessing probabilities of the outcomes and overall system analysis. This analysis technique is used to analyze the effects of functioning or failed systems given that an event has occurred.

An event tree analysis (ETA) examines the different paths that can be taken in a given scenario. Each step consists of a node and corresponding exit lines for each possible outcome at that step.

Event tree analysis provides an inductive approach to reliability assessment as they are constructed using forward logic. Fault trees use a deductive approach as they are constructed by defining TOP events and then use backward logic to define causes. Event tree analysis and fault tree analysis are, however, closely linked.

Event Tree Analysis, usually the abbreviation ETA is used. It is a causal analytical technique which is used to evaluate the process and its events leading to a possible accident. ETA method was developed at the request of the nuclear industry following the accident at Three Mile Island plant.

Event Tree Analysis (ETA) This is a complimentary technique to FTA but defines the consequential events which flow from the primary 'initiating' event. Event trees are used to investigate the consequences of loss-making events in order to find ways of mitigating, rather than preventing, losses. Stages in carrying out event tree analysis:

Fault Tree Analysis (FTA) and Event Tree Analysis (ETA)

Fault tree analysis (FTA) is a graphical tool to explore the causes of system level failures. It uses boolean logic to combine a series of lower level events and it is basically a top-down approach to identify the component level failures (basic event) that cause the system level failure (top event) to occur.

Event tree analysis (ETA) is also a logical model for both failure and success responses from individual factor. Event tree analysis is used for checking the effects of functions, or any error systems.

Difference Between Fault Tree Analysis and Event Tree Analysis

Rectangle – The rectangle is the main building block for the analytical tree. It represents the negative event and is located at the top of the tree and can be located throughout the tree to indicate other events capable of being broken down further. This is the only symbol that will have a logic gate and input events below it.

How to Find Root Cause Using Fault Tree Diagram?

Fault tree diagrams (or negative analytical trees) are logic block diagrams that display the state of a system (top event) in terms of the states of its components (basic events). Like reliability block diagrams (RBDs), fault tree diagrams are a graphical design technique, and as such provide an alternative methodology to RBDs.

Fault tree analysis - Wikipedia

Event Tree Analysis (ETA) is used to determine the path from an initiating event to the various consequences, and the expected frequency of each consequence. Pipes breaking, alarms not activating and humans not performing actions are all examples of events that can lead up to insignificant, or catastrophic, consequences.
