GLOBAL ENERGY TRANSFORMATION

Such a deep transformation of the energy sector would require ambitious policy measures, including a rapid phase out of fossil-fuel subsidies, rising CO 2 prices, extensive electricity market reforms to integrate large shares of renewables, and stringent low-carbon and energy efficiency mandates. Such policies should also ensure energy remains affordable to the billions of people currently without access to energy.

The Energy Transformation to Come How can humanity deal with the dual challenges of climate change and the soaring demand for energy in developing countries? Tom Blees, president of the Science Council for Global Initiatives, a member of the Global Energy Prize International Award Committee, has ThorCon Floating Nuclear Plantanswers to these questions.

The Energy Transformation to Come

There are four factors that are changing the dynamics in energy, utilities and resources: Pressure on resources: This includes the natural resources that energy, utilities and resources companies produce, and the financial resources available to them.

Transformation in energy, utilities and resources

In the literature of relativity, space-time coordinates and the energy/momentum of a particle are often expressed in four-vector form. They are defined so that the length of a four-vector is invariant under a coordinate transformation. This invariance is associated with physical ideas. The invariance of the space-time four-vector is associated with the fact that the speed of light is a constant.
