Assessment is the process by which counselors gather the information they need to form a holistic view of their clients and the problems with which they present. As a counselor, you will regularly assess your clients throughout the counseling process, especially in the early stages.

Introduction to Counseling Assessment LEARNING OBJECTIVES ...

The completion of counselling assessment tools is often seen as a tick-box exercise and is explained away to clients as relating only to the need to collect before-and-after data for funding purposes. In contrast, Ray describes how they can be integrated into the therapeutic process to the benefit of both clients and counsellors.

Assessment Tools in Counselling • [Podcast for Counsellors]

Assessment in the FE/HE context
Traditionally, formal structured assessment is not standard in the counselling field; for some practitioners this could be seen as shifting the focus away from what the client wishes to bring, and towards the imposition of an agenda defined by the counsellor.

Counsellors' Guide - British Association for Counselling ...

This paper reports on a consultation exercise undertaken with 18 experienced counsellors on how they make client assessments. These practitioners expressed a high degree of consensus on the purposes of assessment making (to reach a shared understanding with the client about their willingness and ability to undertake a shared therapeutic journey) but the way in which they approached the task varied according to the theoretical orientation they acquired during training.
