However, the knowledge necessary for dealing with this change is needed by us for two quite different reasons. The first is so that we can change things, and the second is so that we can preserve things - because creation expresses itself to us not only as change, but also as the relative being or existence of bodies or objects that we seek to preserve.

Understanding Reality - Chapter 5

Reality is the independent nature and existence of everything knowable, whether it is knowable by logical inference, empirical observation, or some other form of experience. Reality's existence and nature are independent because reality does not depend on our mind's apprehension of it to continue to exist or to maintain its character.

How the Power of Expectations Can Allow You to 'Bend Reality'

To illustrate the distinction, consider a possible solution to the primary value problem: knowledge is justified true belief, and justified true belief is better than mere true belief, which explains why knowledge is better than true belief. If correct, this hypothesis successfully answers the primary value problem.

The Value of Knowledge (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

The Social Construction of Reality: A Treatise in the Sociology of Knowledge is a 1966 book about the sociology of knowledge by the sociologists Peter L. Berger and Thomas Luckmann. Berger and Luckmann introduced the term social construction into the social sciences and were strongly influenced by the work of Alfred Schütz. Their central concept is that people and groups interacting in a social system create, over time, concepts or mental representations of each other's actions, and that ...

The Social Construction of Reality - Wikipedia

Naturalism asserts that reality, knowledge and values are all expressions of physical reality, and understanding them is based on reason alone. Since the supernatural is not acknowledged to exist, the only way a Naturalist concedes that mankind could have come into existence is by naturalistic evolution.

What is Philosophy? The Basics of Philosophy

Knowledge is the realization of a fact. You may come to know about things through various mediums – books, Internet, education or experience. Going back to the definition of knowledge as justified true belief, we know something to be true (or to be a fact) if we can verify it.
