Seventeen-year-old Melissa is having her best year ever. She's traveling the world on the tall ship Inspiration, and, along with more than thirty other students, getting credit for a full year of high school in the bargain. And, after her boyless years at a private school, it doesn't hurt that one of the students on the ship is tall, dark, and handsome Pierre.

A coincidence is something that happens for no obvious reason. No reason means no cause. Basically, we're getting an effect out of the blue. Usually, this effect is something positive for the character and, as a result, something neither the character nor the author has earned.

Coincidences in

One way to use coincidence and make it work is to have nothing turn on it. Coincidences feel illegitimate when they solve problems. If the story doesn't benefit from the coincidence, it's simply pretty and suggestive. Another way to make a coincidence work is to begin a story with it. Make it the reason there's a story to tell in the first place. A third is to establish that the community in which your story takes place is one in which coincidence is part of the landscape.
