Dakota Dugout is one of my favorite children's books. It reminds me of the stories my grandfather told me when I was a child. He lived on the plains in a sod house, and had wonderful memories of this time, which he relayed to me. The story is very well done. The author evokes a vision of an elderly woman telling her story to a younger child.

A young city woman takes the train to the

Dakota prairie to get married, but when she sees the sod dugout that will be her home, she begins to cry. Suddenly, life takes on new challenges as she learns to live as a married pioneer woman in a home with snakes dropping from the dirt ceiling, experiences the day-to-day loneliness of prairie life and struggles with the hard farm work that gets rewarded with crop failures.
